Re: GED Changes

Overview:

The American Council on Education/GED Testing Service has teamed up with Pearson Vue Testing to develop the computer-based GED Test. This merger has moved the GED Test from a non-profit organization to a for profit organization that will require GED Testing centers to become Pearson Vue Testing Sites. Beginning in January 2014, the GED Test will only be offered by computer (no paper/pencil) and only through Pearson Vue Testing Centers.

What this means for New Mexico Junior College:

- Enter into a contract with PearsonVue to become an official testing center
- Designate a distraction-free location, equipped with computers and access to the internet
- Equipment must meet technical specifications
- Required Enhanced Security Protocol equipment
- Must employ a certified test administrator to proctor the tests
- Will be paid compensation for test delivery $5/scheduled hour/student
- Can offer other PearsonVue tests to the community

What this means for GED Students:

- Test prices will begin at $120 for the entire battery (currently $50)
- Can register for the test(s) online without ABE guidance
- Immediate score results

Suggestions:

- Increase GED testing fee to $120 beginning January 2014
- Utilize the Testing Center as location for GED testing currently equipped with security & computer/internet access.
